ABSTRACT

This catalog contains over 200 entries listing books, booklets, newspapers, magazines, reference materials, videos, and other multi-media resources about Alaska Natives. The catalog was designed for use by secondary school social studies teachers, but many entries could be useful in other academic disciplines and in classes ranging from elementary school to college. All entries are annotated and cataloged by subject area including Alaska Native arts, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, biographies, culture, ethnography, history, legends and stories, and subsistence. Also included are entries describing projects in progress, research ideas, audio-visual materials, bibliographies, curricula, human resources, multi-media materials, periodicals, references, and resources. The catalog is arranged by topics and by Alaska Native groups. Information in each entry includes: subject area, Native group, medium, title, author, publisher, publication date, availability, cost, reading level, and a brief summary of the content. The document also contains updated 1989 entries with an introduction, and an index to cataloger's catalog. (LP)

We thank the State Legislature of Alaska for providing the funding to make this project a reality, and the Alaska Department of Education for keeping the project on track.

And, finally, we are indebted to the many librarians, teachers, professors, curriculum specialists and others who helped us in researching and writing New Paths, Old Ways.

INTRODUCTION

THE CATALOG:

. . . a teaching tool . . .

New Paths, Old Ways: An Alaska Native Studies Catalog for Teachers lists books, videos, and other multi-media resources about Alaska Natives.

The catalog is designed specifically for use by secondary school teachers, particularly social studies teachers, but many of the catalog's entries could be used in classes ranging from elementary school to college.

While New Paths, Old Ways will suit teachers who want to focus on a specific Native region of Alaska, for instance, Inupiaq studies, the catalog's express purpose is to address the broader, statewide subject of Alaska Native studies.

THE CONTENTS:

. . . the entries . . .

The catalog offers over 200 entries, each of which is annotated, and cataloged by subject area, whether it be culture, history, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA), health, education, etc.

Here is an example of an entry:

Subject Area: History

Native Group: All

Title: Alaska: A History of the 49th State

Author: Naske, Claus M., and Herman E. Slotnick

Publisher: University of Oklahoma Press

Date: December 1987

Available: ILL (interlibrary loan); and
University of Oklahoma Press, Mktg. Dept.,
1005 Asp Ave., Norman, OK 73019

Cost: $27.95 plus postage: $1.50 for first book, 50 cents for each additional.

Reading Level: Secondary-Adult

. . . but wait, there's more . . .

New Paths, Old Ways also includes a bibliography of additional resources called the "CATALOGER'S CATALOG," plus a list of ideas for use in the classroom, and an index by title.

. . . let your fingers do the walking . . .

Besides listing materials, the catalog actually helps teachers locate them. The catalog indicates whether materials are available through interlibrary loan (ILL), or through publishers, state agencies, and video production outlets.

. . . a handy visual reference . . .

The catalog sorts entries not only by subject area, but also by Alaska Native group: Inupiaq and Yupik (commonly referred to as Eskimos), Athabascan (interior Indian), Tlingit, Haida, Tsimpshian, (southeast Indian) and Aleut.

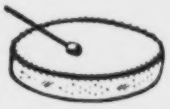
If a particular Native group is indicated, it will be referenced in the upper-right hand corner of the page, with one of the following symbols:

Aleut

Athabascan

Inupiaq

Yupik



Southeast Indian: Tlingit, Haida, and Tsimpshian

READING LEVEL:

. . . easy is not always easy . . .

Where possible, we have included four reading levels in the catalog: easy, secondary, adult and reference. In many instances, the usual standards for measuring readability do not apply to the materials in this catalog. For instance, a Native legend or story may be told in a simple style, but it should not be considered "too easy" for use in the upper grades. Most of the entries in New Paths, Old Ways should be appropriate for high school age students, or as reference materials.

OTHER THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW:

. . . what materials are included and why . . .

This catalog was compiled under the assumption that one of the best ways to advance Native studies is to include materials that were written or developed by Native people themselves. For this reason, we sought out original materials created by Alaska Natives. But, of course, the majority of materials have been created by non-Natives.

Since the catalog is designed primarily for secondary school teachers, we had this audience in mind when selecting materials. Naturally, we also had the teacher's audience in mind as well: the students.

Native studies crosses many different disciplines. So while New Paths, Old Ways emphasizes social studies, it also includes materials from other disciplines, such as art, language arts and religion.

Other catalogs like this one have been produced in the past. We have tried to include the basics from those catalogs and then, advance the body of work, by emphasizing more recent materials. For instance, this catalog does not list older films or filmstrips, but, rather, videotapes that have been created since 1980.

One of the pitfalls of Native studies materials is their cultural bias. We have tried to avoid materials that are patronizing or demeaning to Alaska Natives, but we also count on teachers using this catalog to make that determination themselves.

. . . giving credit where credit is due . . .

This work is a continuum of many other works that came before it, in particular, a work published in 1975 by the University of Alaska Fairbanks, called Cultures in the North. Because of its particular usefulness to this project, we have referenced Cultures in the North throughout the catalog and credited it under the category called "resources." We view our work not so much as new research, but rather, a compilation of other resources in one single catalog. Hence the name New Paths, Old Ways.

. . . it's a start, with a promising future . . .

This catalog will help new teachers get a head start and help veteran teachers find additional resources. This is by no means a comprehensive volume of native studies materials, but it does include many of the basics. We expect to update this catalog annually, which will enable us to provide critical annotations in the future, and of course, include more works. Because there was not time to screen all the materials thoroughly, we are not endorsing any of the publications or materials in this first edition of the catalog.

Most of all, we hope this catalog will help teachers and others identify and locate materials, so that through New Paths, Old Ways, students will arrive at a better understanding of Alaska Natives and their culture.

INTERLIBRARY LOAN (ILL) AND THE ALASKA LIBRARY NETWORK CATALOG (ALN):

Most of the books in this catalog are owned by libraries in Alaska and can be borrowed via interlibrary loan (ILL). All public and school libraries receive The ALASKA LIBRARY NETWORK (ALN) CATALOG annually on microfiche. The current edition of ALN lists over 800,000 unique titles, and the number grows with each edition. Using this catalog, look up the item by either author or title; symbols will be listed for each library owning the title, and the librarian will assist you in placing interlibrary loan requests for materials you need from these libraries. There is no cost for this service, and materials may be borrowed for two to four weeks, depending on the library. If a public or school library is not available, please send your request to the appropriate regional library; these are:

For the Northern Region:

Interlibrary Loan
Fairbanks North Star Borough Public Library
1215 Cowles Street
Fairbanks, AK 99701

For the South Central Region:

Interlibrary Loan
Anchorage Municipal Libraries
3600 Denali
Anchorage, AK 99503

For the Southeast Region:

Interlibrary Loan
Juneau Public Libraries
114 West 4th Street
Juneau, AK 99801

If you have other questions about library service in Alaska, you may contact staff at the Alaska State Library, P.O. Box G, Juneau, AK 99811 (907) 465-2910.

ALASKA STATE FILM LIBRARY:

Many of the videos listed in the catalog are available through the Alaska State Film Library. For more information contact:

Anchorage Film Library
650 West International Airport Road
Anchorage, AK 99502
(907) 561-1132

The Anchorage Film Library will make dubs of their tapes if you provide them with a blank VHS videotape, or you can check out one of the library's in-house copies. The library normally charges fees for both services.

To access the video materials housed at the film library, we recommend ordering a copy of the Instructional Television Catalog produced by the Alaska Department of Education's Office of Instructional Improvement & Evaluation. The ITV catalog lists all the tapes that are available to teachers through the Anchorage Film Library, and over the Rural Alaska Television Network (RATNET), as well. For more information about the ITV Catalog, see the entry on page 131 of New Paths, Old Ways.

OTHER LIBRARY SERVICES:

Gnosis

Gnosis is a computerized library database located at the University of Alaska Fairbanks campus and accessible through the other branches of the University. It lists 600,000 references that can be searched by title, author, subject, or call number. The bibliography of Alaskana, an on-line index of magazine articles about Alaska published since 1986 to present, is also searchable through Gnosis. Access to Gnosis can be obtained via computer at any of the campuses throughout Alaska or by means of a terminal/microcomputer with a modem hookup. For more information about Gnosis, the toll free number to call for information is 800-478-4667.

CHRD Resource Center:

The College of Human and Rural Development Resource Center is located on the University of Alaska Fairbanks campus, in Room 505 of the Gruening Building. This small, yet comprehensive library houses some 5,000 cataloged books. Its holdings include curriculum materials and guides, research papers, publications by various native corporations, or by the state and federal governments, books on ANCSA, teaching, psychology, sociology, Alaska culture, history, oral literature and education.

Cost: Varies

Other: 12 different programs; see also entry for Auvirinmi/ At Summer Camp

Description: Traditional Inupiaq Eskimo Technology consists of a dozen short tapes that document the techniques of Inupiaq craftsmen and women. Although these tapes can stand alone, it's recommended they be used in conjunction with other classroom materials. Highly recommended: Making a Qayaq.

The set includes:

How They Did the Caribou: In the field during a fall caribou hunt on the Kobuk River, Clarence Jackson of Noorvik skins and butchers a caribou in the traditional Inupiaq manner. 19 minutes.

Putting Away Uqruk Flippers: The fermented flippers of the bearded seal are a favorite of the coastal Inupiat. On location at spring camp at Sealing Point, all the steps for making this delicacy are documented. 5 minutes.

Making a Beaver Hat: Elsie Douglas from Ambler demonstrates skin cutting and skin sewing from start to finish, producing a man's hunting cap. 12 minutes.

Making a Birchbark Basket: Elsie Douglas from Ambler demonstrates the making of a traditional star basket made of birchbark. 12 minutes.

Making a Harpoon: Thomas Mitchell builds and explains the process of making a seal harpoon. He uses his experience to craft it perfectly to a hunter's needs. 27 minutes.

Making and Filling a Seal Puuq: This ancient airtight vessel which Carrie Uhl makes from the entire skin of a seal is preferred for rendering seal blubber into oil. With surgical precision, Carrie skins the seal from the inside out. Recorded on location at spring camp on Sealing Point, Cape Krusenstern. 15 minutes.

Making a Qayaq: Parts 1 and 2: Charlie Jones, master craftsman, builds an ocean-going kayak entirely by hand. Part one covers the selection and preparation of wood. Part two shows how to make the kayak frame and cover it. Charlie Jones is one of few remaining craftsmen who know this skill. Part one, 7 minutes; part two, 15 minutes.

Sheefishing: Dan Snyder demonstrates how to fish under the ice with a simple jigging hook. Also shown are the other implements necessary to winter ice fishing. This program was produced on-location near his camp below Noorvik. Snyder mixes wit and a lifetime of experience as he shares his technique with the viewer. 15 minutes.

Sheefish Gillnetting: Setting a fishnet under 4 feet of ice can be tricky. Traditional methods are explained through animation in this program. 5 minutes.

Snaring: Produced on-location at Dan Snyder's camp below Noorvik, he shows the viewer how to build, set and successfully snare rabbits in the snow. 13 minutes.

Making an Ulu: Thomas Mitchell explains step-by-step, how to make a woman's knife, an "ulu," from a cross-cut sawblade and caribou antler. Working by hand, he demonstrates the skill necessary to produce this ancient tool. 19 minutes.

AN ALASKA NATIVE STUDIES IDEAS FILE

HUMAN RESOURCES

Besides all the books, videos, and multi-media materials available to teachers, we suggest tapping into human resources. Guest speakers and visitors can truly bring the subject of Alaska Native studies alive.

Native Corporations:

There are 12 different Native regional corporations within the state of Alaska and some 212 village corporations, all of which have an elected board of directors. The officers and employees of these organizations are usually more than happy to give lectures about ANCSA, land management, corporate policy, as well as to provide information about careers within their company. We urge you to contact them and schedule a lecture.

In addition, many corporations publish newsletters and annual reports that they may be willing to share with your classroom. And, often, students have the opportunity to get hands-on experience through internships in their corporations.

Village Leaders:

You may decide to invite other village leaders to speak in your classroom. Because of their broad experience and education, village leaders can address a variety of topics ranging from subsistence to ANCSA to leadership. You may contact these people through the regional and village corporations, IRA or traditional village councils, non-profit organizations or by making inquiries within the community or region.

Elders:

In any Alaska community, you can find elders who have roots in the traditional way of life, while living in contemporary society. Many elders would be more than happy to come to your classroom and speak or give demonstrations of traditional activities. Again, the regional or village corporations may be of assistance in identifying and locating these elders.

OTHER RESOURCES

Cooperative Extension Service:

The University of Alaska, Cooperative Extension Service, has produced a wide variety of booklets and brochures on subjects including agriculture, fisheries, marine resources, natural resource management, community development, family living, home economics, 4-H, youth education and local government assistance. Many of their publications are free or are available for a nominal fee. Their address is:

THE CATALOGER'S CATALOG

The "cataloger's catalog" lists catalogs, bibliographies, anthologies, directories, curricula, reference books, and relevant periodicals.

In other words, this section of New Paths, Old Ways provides teachers with the names of major resources, besides this catalog, that they can turn to for assistance.

For example: if teachers are looking for autobiographies of Alaska Natives and have already consulted this catalog's entries, but want to find out more, then they should turn to the "cataloger's catalog." The "cataloger's catalog" will tell them that, yes, in fact, there is such a thing as An Annotated Bibliography of American Indian & Eskimo Autobiographies. That resource, which is available through interlibrary loan (ILL) cites 500 autobiographical narratives.

Currently there are not enough good materials on Alaska Native Studies, but the "cataloger's catalog" at least points out many places teachers may look for materials that do exist.

INTRODUCTION
NEW PATHS, OLD WAYS 1989 INSERT

. . . the project continues . . .

In the 1988 version of New Paths, Old Ways, the editors made a pledge to update the catalog annually, provided funding was available.

Fortunately, the Alaska State Legislature provided a grant to continue this project and others at the Center for Alaska Native Studies in the Northwest Arctic Borough School District during the 1988-1989 school year.

. . . the contents . . .

The 1989 insert contains new materials, as well as other items that simply did not make it under the deadline wire in 1988. Among the most helpful entries are several new biographies of Alaska Native leaders, and numerous cultural videotapes that are available through the Alaska State Film Library.

. . . the format . . .

The format for the 1989 insert remains the same, except for the index, which is arranged by subject area, and within that, alphabetically by title.

. . . a note on availability . . .

Remember that the acronym (ILL) stands for interlibrary loan; however, if you are seeking multiple copies of a particular item, chances are the library will not be able to help you. In this instance, it would be worthwhile to check better bookstores. You may have some success finding current listings in bookstores, although older materials will likely be out of print and unavailable. As with the 1988 version, the editors have provided information, where possible, about the availability of materials through publishing houses, libraries and other organizations.

. . . putting it all together . . .

Whether you are new to the subject of Alaska Native studies, or a veteran teacher, this catalog should help you locate materials for your classes. By all means, draw on New Paths, Old Ways when you are putting together a curriculum.

If you would like some help shaping your course, refer to the Cataloger's Catalog (the yellow tabs) in the 1988 version of New Paths, Old Ways. Look under the tab labeled "curricula." There you will find a listing (page 144) for a comprehensive curriculum called the Alaska Studies Connection. You will also notice a listing (page 145) for the Alaska Department of Education's model social studies guide, which includes a section on Alaska studies. (A caution: These materials do not specifically address Alaska Native studies; rather, both are designed to cover the broader subject of Alaska studies.)

. . . more help is just around the corner . . .

A model curriculum that does specifically address Alaska Native studies is in the works at the Center for Alaska Native Studies. It is based on the New Paths, Old Ways catalog. The curriculum should be available by the summer of 1989. For more information, contact:

Reading Level: Secondary-Adult

Description: This five-part instructional television series is designed to be used in conjunction with earlier programs on the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act; it brings them up to date with the passage of the 1991 Amendments. The program focuses on the process leading up to 1991 as well as on specific provisions of the amendments. For this reason, the program is useful in both Alaska Native studies and government classes. The five parts include:

1. History
2. A Civics Lesson
3. Land Protection, New Natives
4. Debate Over the 1991 Amendments
5. Our Land, Our Future

The entire program lasts 55 minutes. Teacher's guide available.
